ProQuest Learning: Literature

Where students come for the latest word on the authors they study in class and read at home!

Great news! Our school has access to ProQuest Learning: Literature, the advanced Internet-based learning resource for students and teachers.

ProQuest Learning: Literature provides more than 80,000 searchable works of poetry, prose, and drama from around the world—and from medieval times to the present. The database also offers secondary sources such as author biographies, criticisms, essays, reviews, multimedia, and interviews that place original works into context.

Simple search methods make it easy for students to find the information they want. They can start browsing more than 650 author and thematic Study Units. The units organize original text, critical articles, historical context, biographies, and web links around each subject.

Teachers and students are using this research solution to...

- Search a comprehensive, global collection of full-text poetry, prose, and drama.
- Browse content by Study Units—a collection of more than 650 of the most-studied authors and themes—or, target information by keyword, title, author, genre, more.
- Find results in full-text—exactly as they would appear in print.
- Use secondary source materials such as biographies, contemporary criticisms, reviews, audio clips, images, and websites to pursue literary inquiries.
- Explore in-depth information on nearly 200 popular authors and their works with KnowledgeNotes Study Guides.
- Examine metaphors, images, phrases, and opinions from more than 600 years of literature.
- Discover authors and works of literature seldom found in textbook examples.
